DESCRIPTION This class surveys a broad range of filmic responses to the most turbulent times of the Twentieth Century, including the First and Second World War, the Holocaust, German separation and unification, and Germany's place within a complexly interconnected Twenty-First-Century world. We will apply a variety of theoretical approaches to determine how German films, as art form and media, represent the past and critique, reflect or incorporate the present circumstances in which they are created. We will explore how totalitarian terror, for example, affects men, women and children, and how the family, ruptured by war and its aftermath, becomes a site of crisis and trauma, but also of potential healing. Students will have the opportunity to critically engage with the material and—using D2L—each other, and they will be given the chance to creatively respond to films by making their own brief movie clips (the Taylor Family Digital Library will make resources available and can assist with editing), if they choose to, in the weeks following block week.

OBJECTIVES This course will help students to

- recognize and describe facts concerning 100+ years of German history and film-making in order to place German films into their broader cultural and historical context;
- watch – or "read" – films critically by treating them as works of art that can be interpreted in various ways;
- integrate existing research on German films into students' own, original approaches.

OUTCOMES Upon successful completion of the course, students will be able to critically and creatively engage with German film through research, discussion, writing, and projects.

COURSE NOTES

Attendance:
You must attend all classes and all film screenings. We will take attendance every morning and afternoon. Please place your student ID in front of you on your desk as you would during a final exam.

Explanation of Assignments:

Homework: Students will have to complete readings (available in the “assignment” section on D2L) every night. The readings will be crucial preparation for the group discussion, the reflective writing paper, and the take-home final.

Quizzes: There will be three short, mostly multiple-choice quizzes that assess your understanding of the assigned readings and major concepts and topics discussed in class.

Group Discussion: In the D2L Discussion forum, each student will have to post a brief introduction on day one and respond a total of three times (for instance on day two, three, and four, but not five, or day three, four, and five, but not two—you get the idea) to ONE of the so-called “Questions of the Day.” The questions focus on issues covered during lecture, the readings, and the films. Posts may include follow-up questions to engage the class. In addition to these three posts, each student must respond at least once to another student’s post (excluding the intro one—you can certainly greet and get to know your classmates, but you will not be graded for that). In your posts and responses, be professional and courteous. Abusive language or behavior constitute misconduct and will be dealt with as such.

Reflective Writing Assignment: Reflective writing helps you turn surface learning into deeper understanding by connecting what was said in class with the films you watched and the readings you studied. The reflection should be 500 words (2 pages) and connect your thinking about the afternoon screenings, the assigned readings, the lectures, and class discussions. On D2L, go to Course Information/Reflections to see details. Please adhere to the following formatting requirements: Your reflections must be typed, have a title page containing your name, course, and student number. The reflection will be assigned on day one (Monday, January 6). Bring your reflection to class on Wednesday, January 8. We will have an in-class writing workshop. Following the writing guidelines and reflection checklist posted on D2L, students will peer-edit their reflective papers. At home, consider your peers’ feedback, edit your paper, and submit the final version to the drop box on the last day of block week, Friday, January 10. Our teaching assistant will return the reflections before you have to hand in the final exam.
Take-home Exam: The final exam consists of short answer questions and a choice between EITHER a creative project, OR an essay, OR a research & summary assignment. The exam will give you the opportunity to draw connections between different films, to synthesize what you have learned, and to critically and creatively explore topics.

Please adhere to the following formatting requirements:

- Title page containing your name, course, and student number.
- One-inch margins all around, double-spaced.

Make sure to include a references list and choose a bibliographical style that you follow consistently (such as APA or MLA). You have three weeks to complete the final exam. Please submit your final exam to the D2L dropbox by midnight, January 31.

ACADEMIC MISCONDUCT

1. Plagiarism is a serious offence, the penalty for which is an F on the assignment and possibly also an F in the course, academic probation, or requirement to withdraw. Plagiarism exists when:
   a) the work submitted or presented was done, in whole or in part, by an individual other than the one submitting or presenting the work (this includes having another impersonate the student or otherwise substituting the work of another for one’s own in an examination or test);
   b) parts of the work are taken from another source without reference to the original author;
   c) the whole work (e.g., an essay) is copied from another source, and/or
   d) a student submits or presents work in one course which has also been submitted in another course (although it may be completely original with that student) without the knowledge of or prior agreement of the instructor involved.

   While it is recognized that scholarly work often involves reference to the ideas, data and conclusions of other scholars, intellectual honesty requires that such references be explicitly and clearly noted.” Plagiarism occurs not only when direct quotations are taken from a source without specific acknowledgement but also when original ideas or data from the source are not acknowledged. A bibliography is insufficient to establish which portions of the student’s work are taken from external sources; footnotes or other recognized forms of citation must be used for this purpose.

2. Cheating at tests or examinations includes but is not limited to dishonest or attempted dishonest conduct such as speaking to other candidates or communicating with them under any circumstances whatsoever; bringing into the examination room any textbook, notebook, memorandum, other written material or mechanical or electronic device not authorized by the examiner; writing an examination or part of it, or consulting any person or materials outside the confines of the examination room without permission to do so, or leaving answer papers exposed to view, or persistent attempts to read other students’ examination papers.

3. Other academic misconduct includes, but is not limited to, tampering or attempts to tamper with examination scripts, class work, grades and/or class records; failure to abide by directions by an instructor regarding the individuality of work handed in; the acquisition, attempted acquisition, possession, and/or distribution of examination materials or information not authorized by the instructor; the impersonation of another student in an examination or other class assignment; the falsification or fabrication of clinical or laboratory reports; the non-authorized tape recording of lectures.

4. Any student who voluntarily and consciously aids another student in the commission of one of these offences is also guilty of academic misconduct.
