DESCRIPTION

Children start out seemingly unable to communicate through language, but typically end up as fully Competent adult communicators. This course introduces us to the study of how children acquire the sounds, words, and grammar of their native language.

OBJECTIVES

We will explore theoretical issues and approaches regarding language acquisition, including the contributions of the innate endowment of the human mind, as opposed to environmental exposure to language. We will largely focus on typical language development and critically examine empirical evidence and experimental methodologies used to study language development from a wide variety of sources. We will also examine how our theory of acquisition impacts our theory of adult language and vice versa.

OUTCOMES

Students will acquire a good understanding of basic terminology and theoretical concepts and approaches in language development. They will develop the skills necessary to pose theoretically interesting questions and critically examine empirical evidence to answer those.

REQUIRED COURSE MATERIALS

COURSE NOTES

encouraged. Class discussion being an integral part of the course, it will prove difficult for people to keep up and do well if they do not attend. Neither the instructor nor the TA(s) will be responsible to share materials or class notes with students who miss class, outside of what will be routinely shared on D2L.

Any accommodation for late assignments will only be considered in cases where unavoidable circumstances of sufficient gravity played an important role. Please see D2L for an exhaustive list of class policies and expectations.

ASSESSMENT

- Homework Assignments: 30%
- Discussion Questions: 10%
- Midterm Exam: 30% due Oct 25th
- Final Exam: 30% due Dec 10th

All assessments contribute to successfully pass the course. Assessment is going to take place online through D2L and is going to be asynchronous. That is, the assessment materials (including exams) will be made available to the students ahead of time and the students will have deadlines by which to submit their responses. Students will be able to work on those on their own time (i.e., over several days or a week) and will not have timed assessments or examinations. Allowed aids include the textbook, lecture slides, and course notes. Due dates for the Midterm and Final exam will be finalized after consultation with the class but are tentatively set as seen above.

GRADING SCALE

A+ = 100-97; A = 93-96; A- = 92-88; B+ = 87-83; B = 82-78; B- = 77-73; C+ = 72-68; C = 67-63; C- = 62-58; D+ = 57-53; D = 52-50; F = 49%
