DESCRIPTION
Researchers from different disciplines have studied language development for decades using different tools and often constructing vastly different theories that attempt to explain the relevant phenomena. This course builds upon previous fundamental background in language acquisition to look in depth at the methods and the arguments researchers have used to construct their theories of language development.

OBJECTIVES
We will explore theoretical and methodological issues and approaches regarding language acquisition in considerable depth. We will largely focus on syntax & semantics and compare and contrast generativist vs. constructivist/functionalist approaches to language development. In contrast with earlier courses in acquisition, our case studies will include data from bilingual and atypical development and a substantial part of the course will focus on evaluating different types of research methodologies. The course will conclude by you putting together you own experimental study of language development on a specific topic.

OUTCOMES
Students will acquire advanced knowledge of important theoretical issues and methods in language acquisition. They will develop the critical skills necessary to evaluate empirical findings and claims and further develop their skills to ask theoretically interesting questions and to develop sound empirical studies to test those. Finally, they will learn how write up their proposal for a study according to disciplinary standards.

REQUIRED TEXTS

There are no required texts other than those provided during the course (via D2L) by the instructor. Required texts will consist of both primary research papers but also book chapters and review pieces.

RECOMMENDED TEXTS

There are several entry-level textbooks on first language acquisition that a student could consult for 'encyclopedic' level knowledge of fundamental issues on the subject if desired. One such textbook is the following:

COURSE NOTES

Classes typically include presentation of material by the Instructor, presentation of research articles by the instructor and/or students, and class discussion. Class discussion will be an essential part of the course, therefore you are required to complete all readings before coming to class. Class attendance, while not mandatory (in the sense that I will not penalize your absence), is very strongly encouraged. Class discussion being an integral part of the course, it will prove difficult for people to keep up and do well if they do not attend. Any accommodation, for late assignments, or missing the midterm will only be considered in cases where sufficient documentation of an unavoidable circumstance of sufficient gravity is provided. Please see D2L for an exhaustive list of class policies and expectations.

ACADEMIC MISCONDUCT

1. Plagiarism is a serious offence, the penalty for which is an F on the assignment and possibly also an F in the course, academic probation, or requirement to withdraw. Plagiarism exists when:
   a) the work submitted or presented was done, in whole or in part, by an individual other than the one submitting or presenting the work (this includes having another impersonate the student or otherwise substituting the work of another for one’s own in an examination or test);
   b) parts of the work are taken from another source without reference to the original author;
   c) the whole work (e.g., an essay) is copied from another source, and/or
   d) a student submits or presents work in one course which has also been submitted in another course (although it may be completely original with that student) without the knowledge of or prior agreement of the instructor involved.

While it is recognized that scholarly work often involves reference to the ideas, data and conclusions of other scholars, intellectual honesty requires that such references be explicitly and clearly noted.” Plagiarism occurs not only when direct quotations are taken from a source without specific acknowledgement but also when original ideas or data from the source are not acknowledged. A bibliography is insufficient to establish which portions of the student’s work are taken from external sources; footnotes or other recognized forms of citation must be used for this purpose.

2. Cheating at tests or examinations includes but is not limited to dishonest or attempted dishonest conduct such as speaking to other candidates or communicating with them under any circumstances whatsoever; bringing into the examination room any textbook, notebook, memorandum, other written material or mechanical or electronic device not authorized by the examiner; writing an examination or part of it, or consulting any person or materials outside the confines of the examination room without permission to do so, or leaving answer papers exposed to view, or persistent attempts to read other students’ examination papers.

3. Other academic misconduct includes, but is not limited to, tampering or attempts to tamper with examination scripts, class work, grades and/or class records; failure to abide by directions by an instructor regarding the individuality of work handed in; the acquisition, attempted acquisition, possession, and/or distribution of examination materials or information not authorized by the instructor; the impersonation of another student in an examination or other class assignment; the falsification or fabrication of clinical or laboratory reports; the non-authorized tape recording of lectures.

4. Any student who voluntarily and consciously aids another student in the commission of one of these offences is also guilty of academic misconduct.

WRITING ACROSS THE CURRICULUM
Writing skills should cross all disciplines. Students are expected to do a substantial amount of writing in their courses and, where appropriate, instructors can and should use writing and the grading thereof as a factor in the evaluation of student work. The services provided by the Writing Centre in the Effective Writing Office (http://www.efwr.ucalgary.ca/) can be utilized by all undergraduate and graduate students who feel they require further assistance.
